Chapter 120: Generals of the Emissaries

The emissaries of Ashborn's clones—Solarius, Aetherion, and Nyxaroth—understood the magnitude of their duties in safeguarding their respective realms and maintaining balance across the multiverse. To ensure the efficiency of their forces and the flawless execution of their responsibilities, each emissary created seven generals. These generals were chosen not only for their strength and wisdom but also for their unwavering loyalty to the Divine Triad and their emissary commanders.

Generals and Their Forces

Each general was granted command over one million winged troops, celestial beings born from the essence of the emissaries' inner worlds. These troops were not ordinary soldiers but highly disciplined warriors, each possessing abilities tailored to their domain.

1. Solarius and His Forces
Solarius, the emissary of the Sanctuary of Radiance, created seven generals whose forces embodied the light of creation and the principles of justice. These troops, numbering seven million, radiated divine brilliance, their golden wings shimmering with celestial power. Each soldier was a master of light-based combat, capable of overwhelming their enemies with dazzling attacks and defensive shields of pure energy.

2. Aetherion and His Forces
Aetherion, the emissary of the Realm of Celestial Glory, shaped his seven generals to lead legions of disciplined and unyielding warriors. These troops, also numbering seven million, were the epitome of martial prowess and strategic expertise. Their silver wings glowed faintly with divine energy, signifying their unbreakable resolve. Equipped with celestial weapons forged in the Armory of Heaven, they were always battle-ready, capable of swift and devastating assaults.

3. Nyxaroth and His Forces
Nyxaroth, the emissary of the Abyssal Void, formed seven generals to command the forces of entropy and shadow. The seven million troops under Nyxaroth's command were dark-winged entities, their forms cloaked in shadowy energy. These soldiers excelled in stealth, manipulation of dark matter, and corrosive attacks that could erode the very essence of their enemies. Their existence was a testament to the inevitability of decay and the power of entropy.

The Time Dilation Effect

The inner worlds of the emissaries were designed with a unique temporal property: time dilation, where one second outside equaled one year inside. This feature allowed the troops to undergo extensive training and preparation within their respective realms, gaining centuries of experience in a matter of minutes in the external world.

1. Training Regimens

The winged troops underwent rigorous combat simulations, mastering their abilities to perfection.

They trained in formations and strategies under the guidance of their generals, ensuring their unity and precision in battle.

2. Resource Optimization

The inner worlds provided an infinite supply of resources, allowing the soldiers to hone their skills without limitation.

Each realm’s unique environment enhanced the soldiers' abilities, aligning them with the attributes of their emissaries and the domain they served.

3. Generational Wisdom

With the passage of millennia inside the inner worlds, the troops accumulated wisdom and experience, making them unparalleled forces of their kind.

The Armies of Ashborn’s Clones

Through the emissaries and their generals, each inner world now commanded a formidable force:

Solarius: 7 generals, 7 million winged troops of radiant light.

Aetherion: 7 generals, 7 million winged troops of celestial glory.

Nyxaroth: 7 generals, 7 million winged troops of shadow and entropy.

Together, these armies represented the might of Ashborn's clones, ensuring that their respective domains thrived and remained secure under the Divine Triad's grand design.

Conclusion

With 21 generals and 21 million winged troops in total, the emissaries fortified their realms and prepared their forces to serve the Divine Triad's will. The combination of their unique attributes, the relentless training in their dilated inner worlds, and their unwavering devotion made these armies an unstoppable force in the multiverse. The balance between creation, order, and destruction was maintained, and the realms of the Divine Triad stood as impregnable bastions of power and purpose.